ABSTRACT

National accreditation of college and university programs for the preparation of all teachers and other professional school personnel at the elementary and secondary school levels is the sole responsibility of the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE). NCATE's scope of accreditation extends to undergraduate preparation programs for early childhood education, elementary school teaching, secondary school teaching, special education teaching, K-12 teaching, and educational communications and information technologies, and to graduate preparation programs in all of the foregoing areas as well as reading, school principalship, supervision and curriculum development, counseling, school psychology, and school superintendency. This publication presents a list of the 527 colleges and universities that are NCATE-accredited institutions (effective September 1, 1983 to August 31, 1984). The accreditation status of each institution's program is reported by degree level. The list also gives the year in which the institution first became accredited by NCATE and the year in which the institution's accredited status will expire. Also included in this booklet are: (1) lists indicating the NCATE coordinating board and council officers and staff; (2) short descriptions of six NCATE committees and the appeals board panel; and (3) a statement of NCATE's purpose and accreditation policies and procedures. INTRODUCTION

This Thirtieth Annual List of NCATE-accredited institutions (effective September 1, 1983 to August 31, 1984) includes the names of 527 colleges and universities. The accreditation status of each institution's programs is reported by degree level. The list also gives the year in which the institution first became accredited by NCATE and the year in which the institution's accredited status will expire.

NCATE's scope of accreditation extends to undergraduate preparation programs for early childhood education, elementary teaching, secondary teaching, special education teaching, K-12 teaching, and educational communications and information technologies and to graduate preparation programs in all of the foregoing areas as well as reading, school principalship, supervision and curriculum development, counseling, school psychology, and school superintendency.

The following symbols are used to identify the various degree levels at which each of the programs within NCATE's jurisdiction is accredited:

B	Designates an undergraduate pre-service program, leading to the conferment of a baccalaureate degree, that qualifies the student for initial certification to teach.
5	Designates a pre-service program that requires the completion of additional credit hours beyond the baccalaureate degree in order to qualify for initial certification.
(M)	Designates a planned program of study beyond the baccalaureate degree, qualifying the student for certification, but which does not lead to the conferment of a master's degree.
M	Designates a planned program of study leading to the conferment of a master's degree.
(S)	Designates a planned program of study beyond the master's degree, qualifying the student for certification, but which does not lead to the conferment of a specialist degree.
S	Designates a planned program of study leading to the conferment of a specialist degree.
D	Designates a planned program of study leading to the conferment of a doctoral degree, either in the form of a Ph.D. or an Ed.D.

This list contains only the names of those institutions whose programs have been accorded NCATE accreditation. Institutions are strictly prohibited from making any use of NCATE's name in connection with any of their unaccredited programs, including any off-campus programs for which no independent review has been conducted.

NCATE COMMITTEES

Committee on Standards

The Committee on Standards meets three times annually to analyze the effectiveness of NCATE's standards for assuring educational quality. The committee is charged with carrying on a systematic program of evaluation designed to assess the validity and reliability of NCATE's standards.

Executive Committee

The Executive Committee of NCATE is responsible for administering NCATE policy and for transacting NCATE business during periods between official NCATE meetings. The Executive Committee also functions as a committee on committees.

Complaint Review Committee

The Complaint Review Committee is responsible for hearing complaints regarding NCATE's policies and procedures as well as those of the institutions it accredits.

Committee on Finance

The Committee on Finance is responsible for making recommendations to NCATE and to its Coordinating Board on the annual budget, financing plans, fees, assessments, and external funding. The committee also oversees NCATE's investments and reviews its annual audit.

Committee on Constitution and By-laws

The Committee on the Constitution and By-laws is charged with recommending changes in NCATE's Constitution and By-laws within the bounds set by NCATE's Certificate of Incorporation.

Committee on Process and Evaluation

The Committee on Process and Evaluation regularly reviews NCATE's policies and procedures in order to ensure that its evaluative processes support constructive analysis, emphasize factors of critical importance, and reflect the educational and training needs of prospective teachers and other professional school personnel.

Appeals Board Panel

Institutional appeals from adverse accrediting decisions rendered by NCATE are heard by an Appeals Board consisting of five members selected from the Appeals Board Panel. The panel is comprised of eighteen members, six of whom are nominated by AACTE, six by NEA, and six by NCATE's other constituent members. Members of the Appeals Board Panel are not eligible to serve on NCATE, its Coordinating Board, its visiting teams, or in any other capacity in the accrediting process during their tenure on the panel.

A STATEMENT OF PURPOSE, POLICIES, AND PROCEDURES

National accreditation of college and university programs for the preparation of all teachers and other professional school personnel at the elementary and secondary levels is the sole responsibility of the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE). NCATE is recognized by the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation as having authority to adopt standards and procedures for accreditation and to determine the accreditation status of institutional programs for preparing teachers and other professional school personnel. NCATE is also designated by the U.S. Secretary of Education as the only nationally-recognized accrediting agency in the field of education.

PURPOSE

The purpose of the Council is to accredit college and university programs of teacher education in the United States. The Council accomplishes this purpose by applying its Standards for the Accreditation of Teacher Education to all those teacher education programs for which NCATE accreditation is sought. More specifically, NCATE's activities include (1) adopting standards and developing policies and procedures designed to better the accreditation process; (2) carrying on a systematic program of evaluation of its standards, developing new standards, and revising those which have become outdated; (3) establishing channels through which its constituent and associate members, teacher education institutions, and other groups, including the public at-large, may recommend changes in NCATE's policies, standards, and procedures; (4) making the final determination regarding the accreditation status of those teacher education programs which seek NCATE accreditation; (5) publishing an annual list of institutional programs of teacher education accredited by NCATE, identifying them according to the institutions with which they are affiliated; (6) establishing an appeals board to hear institutional appeals from its decisions; and (7) providing training opportunities for those who render the programmatic assessments upon which the Council's accreditation decisions are based.

ACCREDITATION POLICIES

The following policies govern the manner in which NCATE's accrediting functions are executed.

Scope of Accreditation

NCATE's scope of accreditation extends only to the accreditation of college and university programs of teacher education in the United States.

Eligibility

No application for NCATE accreditation will be considered unless it is submitted by the chief executive officer of the institution for which accreditation is sought. In addition, NCATE requires that an institution seeking its accreditation give evidence that (1) its teacher education programs have the approval of the appropriate state educational agency in the state in which the institution is located; (2) it is regionally accredited; (3) it does not discriminate on the basis of race, creed, color, or sex; and (4) students have been graduated from the programs to be accredited so that their performance can have been evaluated.

Composition of NCATE's Teams

Members of NCATE's visiting teams are competent and knowledgeable persons, qualified by experience and training, and selected in accordance with non-discriminatory practices. One-third of NCATE's teams is selected from personnel nominated by the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education. One-third is selected from personnel nominated by the National Education Association. And one-third is selected from personnel nominated by other constituent and associate members of NCATE. Institutions are allowed to veto for cause the appointment of any team member asked to evaluate the institution's compliance with NCATE's standards.

Changes in NCATE's Standards

NCATE's standards may be adopted, deleted, or amended at any of its regular or special meetings as long as a complete and final draft of any proposals, together with any explanatory materials, has been distributed to all of NCATE's representative members, all presently accredited institutions, and all constituent organizations, at least four months prior to any such meeting. All of the foregoing parties may avail themselves of the opportunity to comment on such standards prior to their adoption, deletion, or amendment.

Complaint Review

The National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education acknowledges and reviews any and all information it receives regarding allegations of unsatisfactory conditions at the schools, colleges, and departments of education it accredits. Ordinarily, the Council files this information with whatever materials are to be made part of the documentation to be reviewed at the time of the next regularly scheduled accreditation visit.

In certain limited instances the Council does give further consideration to complaints alleging that an accredited school, college, or department of education is not in compliance with the standards of the Council if the conditions reported to exist are such as to jeopardize the quality of the institution's teacher education programs or the general welfare of the school, college, or department of education. The Council does not, however, investigate isolated individual grievances, unless doing so may help determine whether they reflect conditions within an institution that affect the quality of its teacher education programs or are inimical to the general welfare of the school, college, or department of education.

Term of Accreditation

Initial accreditation of an institution's teacher education programs becomes effective in September of the academic year during which the institution is visited. Reaccreditation becomes effective in September of the first year of the new period of accreditation, unless otherwise indicated in NCATE's action letter. NCATE accreditation is effective for a period of seven years. In the fifth year of the accreditation cycle, an interim accreditation visit is scheduled. If the institution is found to be in satisfactory compliance with NCATE's standards, its accreditation will be continued for another five years. If, on the other hand, deficiencies are found in the institution's teacher education programs, the institution's visit will be scheduled at the end of the seventh year of the accreditation cycle.

Revocation of Accreditation

NCATE reserves the right to request that an institution be reevaluated any time there is compelling reason to believe that such institution, or one or more of its programs, no longer meets NCATE's standards. If NCATE determines that its standards are not being met, it may revoke the institution's accredited status.

Accreditation shall cease automatically if an institution (1) refuses to pay the fees it has been assessed, or (2) refuses to submit reports and other documents required for accreditation, or (3) ceases to offer a program that has been accredited.

Accreditation Fees

Each institution seeking accreditation of its teacher education programs is expected to bear the expenses of the visiting team members empaneled to conduct the initial evaluation and such other evaluations as NCATE, in its discretion, may require. In addition, each institution is assessed an annual fee based on the number of programs and degree levels accredited. Institutions seeking initial accreditation pay an additional entry fee. Institutions also support NCATE activities through the membership fees they contribute to the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education. Institutions not affiliated with the AACTE pay NCATE an annual sustaining fee.

Reciprocity

Graduates of NCATE-accredited teacher education programs are eligible to be granted reciprocity when applying for certification to teach in the public schools of many states. To determine if they qualify for this privilege, graduates of NCATE-accredited institutions should contact the state director of teacher education and certification in the state in which they are interested in teaching.

ACCREDITATION PROCEDURES

As an integral part of its accrediting process, NCATE requires that any institution submitting an application for accreditation complete an institutional self-study prior to NCATE's sending a visiting team to the institution's campus.

The institutional report required by NCATE is a qualitative assessment of the strengths and weaknesses of the institution's teacher education programs. It generally includes a lengthy discussion of the steps the institution has taken to achieve its institutional and programmatic objectives. This document is always accompanied by a description of the institution's administrative staff and teaching faculty. The institution is also expected to describe its policies regarding the admission and retention of students, the resources it has available for use in its teacher preparation programs, and its plans for the long-range future of its teacher education curricula.

Once the institution's application for accreditation is accepted, a team visits the institution's campus for approximately three days, during which time its members interview faculty, administrators, students, and other interested persons. This visit is generally scheduled six to twelve months after NCATE receives the institution's application.

NCATE does allow an applicant-institution to delay its scheduled visit for good cause shown. Such delays may not exceed one year. During the pendency of the delay, the institution's period of accreditation is not extended, unless the delay is granted at NCATE's request.

Following the team's visit, a written report is prepared, commenting on areas of strength, areas needing improvement, and areas which fail altogether to meet NCATE's standards. The chief executive officer of the institution or program under review is then given an opportunity to comment on the written report and to file supplemental materials pertinent to the facts and conclusions in the written report of the visiting team before NCATE takes action on the team's report.

The team report and the institutional response are evaluated by an audit committee of NCATE. That committee then recommends to NCATE whether the institution's teacher education program ought to be accredited, reaccredited, or denied accreditation. NCATE, in turn, hears and acts upon the recommendations of the audit committee.

In any case where NCATE has rendered an adverse accrediting decision, the chief executive officer of the institution in question is provided with a specific statement of reasons for the decision and a notice of the right to appeal that decision. The institution's right to a hearing before the NCATE Appeals Board is unqualified.

Appeals from adverse accrediting decisions are normally heard thirty days prior to the next regularly scheduled NCATE meeting. During the pendency of the appeal, no change is made in the accreditation status of the appellant-institution or program. The institution may be represented by counsel, and witnesses may be called on its behalf. Following the hearing, the chief executive officer of the institution is provided with a written decision of the Appeals Board, specifying the Board's findings with respect to the merits of the institution's appeal.

If no appeal is heard and no delay is granted, accreditation is generally accorded within twelve months after the institution submits its initial application.
